'Crowdfunding increasingly helping patients in need of expensive treatment'

Says co-founder of Milaap

STAFF REPORTER

MADURAI

Crowdfunding was increasingly becoming an option used by patients in need of expensive treatment, said Anoj Viswanathan, president and co-founder of the online crowdfunding platform Milaap here on Saturday.

Addressing the media here in association with Meenakshi Mission Hospital and Research Centre, he said that 90 % of the donations sought through the platform in last two years were for healthcare.

"We have managed to raise around ₹ 330 crore to assist more than 15,000 patients since our inception in 2010," he said.

Explaining how the platform worked, he said that anybody was free to raise a request for donations from the public. "We verify the genuineness of all the requests before uploading them to our platform," he said.

While the norm was for individuals to promote their requests through their own connections on social media platforms, he said that in a few deserving cases, Milaap would promote the requests through its social media platforms that have a huge following.

"Sometimes, the family may be extremely poor, or the need may be immediate. Usually such cases are chosen for promotion by us," he said.

He stressed the platform, however, need not be used just for healthcare related needs, but for any other crowdfunding purposes.

Kasi Viswanathan from the Paediatric Oncology department at MMHRC said that the hospital had helped its patients raise around ₹ 2 crore for treatment in the last three to four years.

"Though it is relatively easy to cure cancer in children than in adults, it is quite expensive and many families cannot afford. That is where this crowdfunding is proving to be useful," he said.

He highlighted in particular the cases of two children, one with a genetic immune deficiency disorder and the other with blood cancer, where crowdfunding helped in raising funds for their treatment.

Toilet-bed helps labourer rise to nat'l glory

On March 2, President Ram Nath Kovind presented National Innovation Award, ₹2 lakh cash prize to Saravana Muthu

SREMATI M @ Nagercoil

A 42-YEAR-OLD man who has been working as a labourer at a welding workshop here for more than a decade has received the National Innovation Award from the Department of Science and Technology, Ministry of Science and Technology, Government of India for designing a toilet-bed suitable for bed-ridden patients. On March 2, President Ram Nath Kovind presented the award, a cash prize of ₹2 lakh, and ₹35,000 (for making the first toilet-bed) to S Saravana Muthu.

On Labour Day, Saravana Muthu (42), the inventor of the toilet-bed, shares the hurdles he had faced before achieving his goal. Owing to his family's poor financial condition, Muthu had to discontinue his studies due to his family's poor financial condition when he was in Tenkasi. Since Muthu's father and grandfather worked at a welding-cum-mechanic workshop in Tenkasi, he had joined the same profession at the age of 10.

After marriage, Muthu moved to Nagercoil and had begun to work at a welding workshop. Though he has been working for the past 13 years, he could not start his own workshop. However, his longing for recognition had made him design and create a toilet-bed.

Sharing his story with Express, Muthu said, "After joining this profession, I have improvised the functioning of many existing inventions and have also upgraded many. I have also made projects for many engineering students. Though the projects had been recognised, I did not fetch me any credit. The appreciation earned by my projects spiked my interest to invent something."

It was during this time (2015) Muthu's wife Krishnammal had fallen ill and eventually became bed-ridden. After three months of work, he came up with a design for a toilet-bed prototype for his wife. However, these prototypes were either failed nor up to Muthu's expectation. Eventually, he created five more prototypes, one after the other, and satisfied with the final version that took a good two months.

As soon as the design was finalised, Muthu had begun putting the pieces together and created the first toilet-bed prototype that cost him ₹96,925, including the wastage cost ₹35,000. Muthu says that the production cost could be considerably reduced if his invention is mass-produced. "I have received orders for toilet-beds from across the world. Many hospitals have also expressed their interest in procuring the toilet-beds. For manufacturing the toilet-beds in high numbers, I will either tie-up with any company or start my own if the government provide me with a loan," he added.

Muthu added that has was working on designing a car that doesn't need fuel and protects the environment from air pollution. "I request the students and labourers, who are aimed at inventing something, to not lose hope and continue their work. The National Innovation Foundation recognises inventions and every invention should be registered," he added.

UPDATES IN RNTCP

Since 2003, Meenakshi Mission hospital enrolled as "Microscopic testing and treatment centre. Meenakshi Mission hospital happy to publish an article about revised national tuberculosis control program written by Dr. S. Zufire Hassan Mohamed Khan, MBBS., DTCD.,

Dr. S. Zufire Hassan Mohamed Khan, MBBS., DTCD.,
Deputy Director of Medical Services (TB), Madurai District.

Tuberculosis is an Infectious Bacterial disease caused by Mycobacterium Tuberculosis, which most commonly affects the lungs, but can involve any part of body.

India accounts for about one fourth of the global TB Burden. In India >40 % of population is infected with Mycobacterium Tuberculosis. It is also estimate that about 2.2 lakhs people died due to TB annually.

TB kills more population in India than any other infectious disease. (i.e 2 death for every 5 minutes. Also untreated sputum positive patient will spread the disease around 15 new members annually.

The private sector holds more than 70 % of health care service delivery in India. We need to concentrate some difficulties which are faced in private sector like delay in diagnosis, over diagnosis TB due to over dependence of X-rays, the use of multiple non standard regimens. The lack of mechanism to ensure the full course of treatment and also to record treatment outcomes.

So RNTCP to extend Public service to privately managed patients. Standards for TB care in India , Mandatory TB Notification, NIKSHAY, Ban on serological diagnostics and amendments in the H1 schedule are the tools to improve TB care service in private sector.

Diaignostic Updates

Smear microscopy being the most commonly used method for microbiological diagnosis of TB for the last several decades.

Now CBNAAT (Catridge Based Nuclic Acid Amplification Test) provides accurate and rapid diagnosis of TB by detecting Mycobacterium Tuberculosis. Rifampicin resistance conferring mutation in all samples except Blood, stools and urine. Real time PCR can detect even in low number of TB bacillies. So all private practitioners are requested to send a sputum or any other sample to CBNAAT for early and accurate diagnosis of TB.

Tools for microbiological confirmation of TB

All efforts should be undertaken for microbiologically confirming, the diagnosis in presumptive TB patients. Under RNTCP, acceptable methods for microbiological diagnosis of TB care:

Sputum Smear Microscopy (for AFB)	Culture	Rapid Molecular Diagnostic Testing
Zeihi Nelson Staining	Solid (LJ) media	Line Probe Assay
Fluorescent Staining	Liquid Culture System	CBNAAT

CBNAAT in Non respiratory specimen

Specimen Type	Sensitivity (%)	Specificity (%)
Lymph Node Biopsy	93 (70-99)	98 (all combined)
Tissues all types	88 (76-94)
CSF	85 (75-100)
Pleural fluid	34 (24-44)
Other fluid samples (Pericardial, Ascitic, Synovial)	67 (0-100)	99%
Gastric aspirates	78% (68-85)

A positive test provides useful confirmation so that ATT can be started promptly
A negative test does not always rule out TB.
